Livia Keene studied at the University of California Davis from June 2018 to December 2020, and graduated with a Bachelor's in English and Professional Writing, with honors.

While attending UC Davis, Livia studied under Sasha Abramsky, whose passion for politics and justice inspired her desire to pursue environmental policy. She completed a writing and social media internship with Tellus, which helped hone her writing and social media fluency.

In her previous position, Livia worked as a farmer, farm educator, and events coordinator with Sierra Harvest, an educational, food based non-profit. During her time there, she coordinated multiple fundraisers and educational events for farmers and students, helping create the next agricultural generation and building a stronger community. She hopes to pursue a master's in public policy. Email Livia at livia@calpsc.org and connect on LinkedIn.
