

Jordan Wells Special Projects Manager II

Bio:

Jordan received a Bachelor of Arts in Sustainability from San Diego State University (SDSU) in August 2014. She studied abroad in the summer of 2013, taking courses on International Relations and Environmental History at the University of Oxford. Jordan held the position of SDSU's Sustainability Commissioner for the 2013-2014 academic year, where she led monthly meetings, workshops, and campus-wide events. The Sustainability department awarded Jordan the Outstanding Graduate Award for 2014.

Jordan joined the California Product Stewardship Council (CPSC) as an intern in November 2014, worked as an Associate for three years, then became a Project Manager in October 2017. In December 2018 she became the Special Projects Manager II. At CPSC, Jordan manages the organization's numerous grant projects to reduce hazardous waste and promote environmentally friendly alternatives. She is also Manager of the ReFuel Your Fun and Don't Rush to Flush Campaigns, and provides expertise on numerous product types and initiatives, including gas cylinders, medications and sharps, and more.

A Sacramento native, Jordan enjoys practicing yoga, traveling, and advocating for the environment. She brings a positive energy to the CPSC team and a passion for waste reduction.
